Clinic Monday

Blood Aim 2000 Pints

McGill's seventh annual Blood Drive opens Monday, October 24, with an objective of 2,000 pints.

This year the clinic will run for seven days instead of the customary Monday-through-Friday as in former years. The ten bed Clinic will be situated in the basement of the Physical Science Centre, and will be open from 9 to 11:30 a.m. and 1:15 to 5 p.m.

Competition is an integral part of the Blood Drive at McGill, and involves the pittings of residence against residence, fraternity against fraternity, and faculty against faculty. In the last grouping, the faculties of Commerce, Arts & Science, and Engineering will vie for the ownership of Bloody Mary, feminine symbol of bloodgiving supremacy.

Frat Lists Needed

All fraternities must hand in their lists of eligible donors to the McGill Blood Clinic at the Red Cross Building, 3420 McTavish St., before October 24.

Once again this year McGill will compete with the University of Montreal for the greatest number of donations. U of M's clinic ended last week with the collecting of 2119 bottles, 19 more than their objective. Their clinic also ran for seven days.

An inter-university cup has been donated by Henry Birks & Co., and will be presented to the winning college. Last year's totals for McGill and University of Montreal came to 1675 and 2148 pints, respectively.

Make Appointments

Appointment booths have been set up at various spots on the campus—in the Arts and Engineering Buildings, the Union, RVC, and Wilson and Douglas Halls. Although it is not essential that appointments be made in advance, preference will be given at the clinic to those who have done so.

BROTHERLY BLOOD

All sororities and fraternities must hand in their total lists of eligible donors to the McGill Blood Clinic at the Red Cross Building on McTavish Street before Monday, Oct. 24. There will be inter-sorority and inter-fraternity competition.

ENGINEERS OFFERED ARMY TOUR THURSDAY

A conducted tour of the No. 25 Central Ordnance Depot and No. 202 Base Workshop, RCME, will be featured Thursday by the McGill contingent of the Canadian Officer's Training Corps.

The tour is open to a limited number of first and second year engineering students, who may be interested in the army training program offered by the COTC.

A bus will leave from the Engineering Building at about 1:10 p.m. and students will be given the opportunity to inspect the aforementioned installations. The No. 25 Central Ordnance Depot at Longue Pointe is the largest installation for the storage and distribution of military technical stores in the British Commonwealth. The No. 202 Base Workshop of the Royal Canadian Electrical and Mechanical Engineers is a large installation dealing in heavy repairs and modification to almost all kinds of army engineering equipment.

The number of students on the tours will be limited to forty, and students interested should contact the C.O.T.C. Office

Students' Role Praised

McGill students and members of the university football team involved in Sunday night's C.N.R. train crash performed "outstandingly" in the melee that followed, according to two prominent McGill authorities.

Harry Griffiths, director of athletics, and Dr. J. S. Smit, football team doctor, both praised the students for the work they did to clear the area, aid the injured, and generally calm the situation.

"They did more to help the situation than many others who received more prominence in newspaper accounts", Dr. Smit told The Daily last night.

"By the time other rescuers arrived, they laid a firm groundwork for the actual rescue work."

Griffiths Lauds Students

Mr. Griffiths was equally laudatory in his account of the accident, which saw the Canadian National Railway's crack No. 6 train, travelling from Toronto to Montreal, plough into a stalled car at Riviere Beaudette, Que.

The train was only three-quarters of an hour out of Montreal when she smashed into the vehicle, stalled on a level crossing. The first nine cars were reported derailed. The students had been in Toronto for the football week-end.

No one was killed, and only 12 passengers were kept for hospital

SIR W. K. FRY SPEAKS TO DENTAL GRADUATES

Some 700 graduates of the McGill Faculty of Dentistry are expected to be on hand today, when the faculty celebrates its 50th anniversary.

The events are featured by a convocation this morning at Redpath Hall, at 11 a.m., when three outstanding dental educationalists will be honored with honorary degrees.

Sir William Kelsey Fry, of London, England, who will receive the degree of Doctor of Science, will be the guest speaker at the convocation and at an anniversary dinner tonight.

Dr. Arthur L. Walsh and Dr. Frederick G. Henry, both of Montreal, who will be awarded the title of Professor Emeritus, will be the guest speakers at a special luncheon for members of the faculty and their wives.

Main feature of the celebration will be a visit to the newly opened University dental clinic, at the Montreal General Hospital. The conducted tour will start at 3 p.m., when each department of the faculty will have exhibits of students' work or teaching facilities on display.

The special luncheon will be held after the convocation this morning, at the Mount Stephen Club. The tour follows.

Attend Special Tea

After the tour, visitors to the hospital will attend a special tea. Prof. W. C. Bushnell will act as chairman at the anniversary dinner this evening at the Ritz Carleton Hotel, for dental graduates.

The anniversary celebration was especially planned to coincide with the 31st annual fall clinic of the Montreal Dental Club, which will be held tomorrow, Thursday and Friday.

The new dental clinic has many special features, and is three times as large as was available at the old hospital. There is also ample room to add on 5000 more square feet, if and when necessary. According to officials, this would permit doubling the number of students.

Specific names have been given each room, but most are multi-purpose and serve several other faculty departments.

Due to its size, communications have become more complex than ever. A public address system is in use, as well as the usual call board.

Each of the cubicles in the main clinic is designed for use by two students. Similar attempts have been made in planning the laboratory to ensure full utilization of all equipment and space.

4 FINALISTS ARE CHOSEN IN BOVEY SHIELD DEBATE

Three boys and one girl have been selected as finalists in the Bovey Shield Debating Contest. The judges were unanimous in their choice of Michael Beausang B. Com. 1, Perry Cohen, B. A. 1, Geraldine Ostroff B. A. 1, and Robert Tasso, B. Com. 1.

Each speaker had five minutes in which to develop one of three resolutions. Robert Tasso, upholding the negative of "Resolved that our civilization has entered a period of decline" pointed out that the general civilization characteristic of our nuclear civilization is that more people are enjoying more things. Using progress as his key concept, he said that our civilization is progressing in a greater variety of fields which leads us to conclude that it is on the incline.

Miss Ostroff took a similar position. Expressing her confidence in progress she said, "Our civilization has in the past few decades reached a period of rapid growth never before achieved". It is my belief that it will continue to grow (Continued on Page 4)

HAMMOND GUIDES RADIO WORKSHOP PUPILS TONIGHT

The Radio Workshop opens its fourth season under the tutelage of Radio Station CFCF at the CFCF Cote Des Neiges Studio tonight at 8 p.m.

Station master J. A. Hammond will guide students on a tour of the station and introduce them to the various personalities who will be teaching them fundamentals of announcing and operating later on in the season.

Meet on Tuesdays

The Radio Workshop will be meeting on Tuesday evenings for the remainder of the semester. Agendas outlining the year's program will be distributed.

Interested students who were unable to sign up at Activities Night or to attend the first meeting are invited to join the club at the first meeting are invited to join tonight.

A MUCH NEEDED EXPANSION

We are pleased to see that McGill is continuing its policy of expanding to meet the needs of the students. The present renovation of a building that has been a traditional part of student life on this campus for more years than most professors would care to remember, illustrates well the determination of those connected with McGill to see that she does not fall behind in the struggle to accommodate the increasingly large student enrollment.

There is a certain basic minimum number of needs of the student that must be satisfied if McGill is to continue to operate in the tradition of the great university it has always been. In addition, when the architect must deal with a building that has a traditional atmosphere, the greatest care must be taken not to sacrifice atmosphere to more practical considerations, if this can be helped.

We wish every success to the proprietors of the Shrine in their worthy endeavor to keep up with the needs of the McGill student:

A YEAR WASTED?

Elsewhere on these pages we have printed a letter to the editor concerning the Latin requirement at McGill. Over the years there have been a great many words written on this subject, particularly on the question of whether Latin is really a necessary part of a university education in this day and age.

We do not propose to discuss that aspect of the situation here. Evidently the McGill authorities feel that it is necessary. Therefore there is nothing we, as students, can do about it, except to complain loudly, which we have done ably over the years.

However, this letter points out what we feel is a major flaw in the system for teaching Latin at McGill. There is no middle course for students who have had some Latin in high school, but have not had enough to be able to take the university's advanced Latin. Students who have taken two or three years of the subject before coming to McGill are plunked into the same class with students who have had no Latin at all. To find a middle ground for teaching such a course is well nigh impossible. If the lecturer goes fast enough to keep the interest of those who have some knowledge of the subject, he will be setting an impossible pace for those who know nothing of it. If he caters to the latter group, the former are bound to feel that they are wasting their time.

Our correspondent makes the suggestion that students who have had Latin in high school, but have not had enough to take the advanced course, be allowed to go directly into Latin 2, which is now given as a continuation of Latin 1, the two together being necessary to fulfill the classics language requirement. At present this is not allowed. If it were, it seems to us that it would ease the classroom situation for both the lecturer and the student, and when he was through the student would presumably know the same amount of Latin.

The ruling which keeps students from going directly into Latin 2 is not set by the Latin department, but by the Arts Faculty, and applies to any language to satisfy the classics or modern language requirements. The Arts and Science bulletin states:

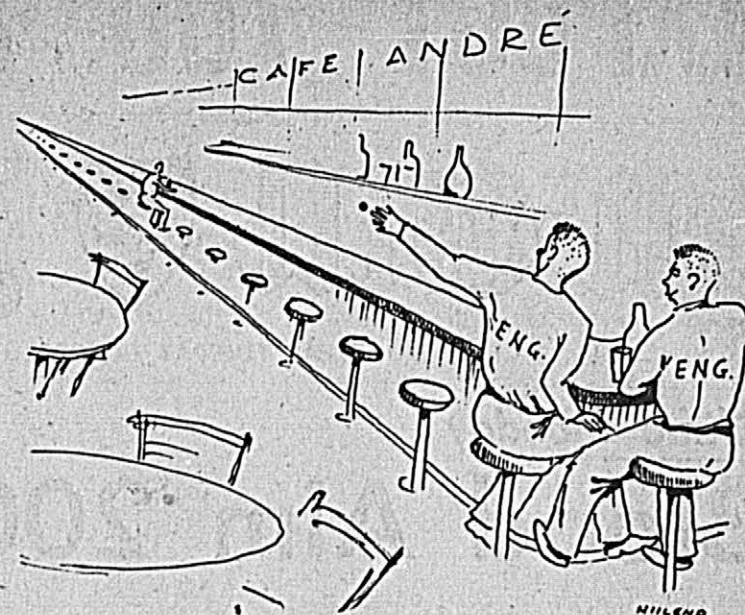

"Where a student chooses to begin the study of a language in order to meet either the classics or modern language requirement, he must take and pass a further course subsequent to the elementary one to satisfy this language requirement."

As far as the Latin department is concerned, we are told that the main difficulty in letting students directly into Latin 2 would be in deciding which have had enough Latin to qualify for this course, and which must after all start in the elementary course. Those who now register in Latin 1 fall into four groups: Some have had no Latin, some one, two or three years of it. In addition, high schools differ in the amount of Latin they give their pupils in the specified length of time. Where and how is the line to be drawn?

We suggest that perhaps an examination could be given to all students who wish to take Latin 2 without first taking Latin 1. A similar examination is given to all first year students by the English department every year, and on the basis of this some students are excused from taking the English composition course required of the rest.

This exam should get around the difficulty of deciding which students are qualified to go into Latin 2. Thus students who are now wasting a year reviewing the course when they could

Letters to the Editor

A Complaint

Sir,

. . . I enrolled in Latin 1, described in the Arts and Science Handbook as a beginner's course. After attending some five or six lectures I became quite aware that this could hardly be accurately described as a beginner's course. The lecturer is merrily skipping his way through the course at a rate of five chapters a week, or nearly two per lecture . . .

Now granted, most of the students enrolled in Latin 1 have had some Latin before, and to them this is old stuff. The lecturer seems to think that these are the people to whom the course is directed . . . He did state, quite clearly on one occasion, that he would skip through the first elementary part of the course as quickly as possible, so that he could get on to the more interesting material.

All well and good, if this is to be a refresher course in Latin. Unfortunately for the four or five members of the class who have never seen Latin before, this makes the going rather rough . . . At the rate the lecturer is going . . . it means spending more time than is necessary on this subject to the detriment of other, perhaps more important studies.

It is perhaps unfortunate that students who have had Latin before, but have not the requirements to be admitted to Latin 2, are forced to take a beginner's course. Perhaps these people should be allowed to take only the second half of the course. At any rate, if Latin 1 is to be a beginner's course, then I wish the lecturer would for the sake of those few who are beginners, conduct it as such.

Fil Fraser.

The time has come for all hockey enthusiasts to get their skates out of that big trunk in the basement and race for the nearest skate-sharpener. In an exclusive interview granted to the

Turkish Banking Delight

Bank Deposits in Turkey jumped 25% last year and no wonder. Customers are lured by lotteries. Let's say you have the equivalent of $35 on deposit with a Turkish bank. It not only earns 3% interest, but also gives you a chance on a house and lot. The bigger your deposit, the greater the chance of winning that an old-time sultan is taking advantage of the situation. He makes every member of his harem operate a separate savings account, thus increasing his household's chances of winning.

Delightful as it must be to operate a bank account in Turkey, you've got to admit that it's more convenient to have one closer to home. And while the Royal Bank can't offer McGill students a chance on a house and lot, it tries to make up for it with snappy service. These are six Royal Bank branches handy to McGill - Sherbrooke & Fort, Sherbrooke & Peel, St. Catherine & McGill, St. Catherine & Stanley, Sherbrooke & Bleury, and Sherbrooke & Guy. Do drop in some time. The Royal Bank of Canada.

lined plans for this seasons early practices.

The first official practice for ALL people interested in trying out for this year's edition of the hockey Redmen will be held at the Montreal Forum (no the Winter Stadium isn't ready yet), on the corner of St. Catherine and Atwater. The time is from 12:30 to 1:30 pm this Thursday, October 20, 1955.

Any boy at the University who isn't a freshman is eligible to try out for the team. In addition, Rocky would like to see anyone who wants to try for the team at his office in the Gym on Tuesday or Wednesday between the hours of 12 and 2. All newcomers are especially urged to keep this appointment with the Rock.

"Dearie, Do You Remember When?"

by
IRWIN SANKOFF

While talking over the non to bright plight of the McGill football future in the Daily offices some time ago, the memory of McGill's brightest football star of the past came to the fore. The memories were dimmed by the passing of several years, but we could still recall many of his famous doings.

It seemed like yesterday, but actually was a decade, or even a score of years ago that he enrolled at McGill — without a scholarship! He came by way of the USA and several of its noted college. Among his Alma Maters were Dotre Name, Ahmmy and Navey.

Actually his position on the Ahmmy team was held in high esteem by all the students of that college. He was in charge of the mule. To the uneducated the mule is the Ahmmy mascot. He left when he was caught in a most tender spot by one of the mule's well placed kicks.

His duties were similar at Navey (in charge of the goat) and at Dotre Name where he spent his time feeding the four horstmen and the seven schmoos.

But he left these halls of learning to come to McGill and play football. Actually it is rumoured that since the above mentioned schools have no cheerleaderettes, he left them for a change of scenery. The Daily kept his feats on the practice field secret, but who can forget that memorable day when he played his first game against Varsity, or was it Queen's.

He came trotting onto the field, big shoulders and a powerful looking build, looking around for cheerleaderettes when he tripped on his cleats and landed unceremoniously in the broad-jumping pit.

One time during that game he dove for a fumble. The depression where he landed can still be traced out by his most ardent followers on the North side of the field.

Then there was that great day against Archipelago Teachers College Aggies, or it might have been Western (they were both in the league then), when he saved the game in the last minute of play. The visitors had just scored to cut our lead to 12-11 and were lining up for the convert when our hero of the day permitted himself to be hoisted on his teammates shoulders, and thus blocked the convert — getting it full force in the face. Some of the Meds performed plastic surgery on his face, or what was left of it, for anonomal sum of rubles. Needless to say he made everybody's all-star team.

The next year a brilliant play on his part won a game for our team. You must remember that day when we played Queen's, or Western as the case may have been. With two minutes to go the Red and White, a 3.4 to 2.1 underdog, was tied 36-36 in a battle of winglines. They, (the winglines), were fighting it out on Peel Street, hence the score. We had the ball on the Varsity (was it Varsity though?) 14 when the ref dropped his hankchief to signal a penalty against our alma mater.

But as fate would have it our boy had a sudden onslaught of his hayfever and as you know, football pants don't have pockets, so he had no sanitary device to stop the germs from spreading. Putting mind over matter, and taking the square of the answer to a 4.8% error, he picked up the hanky and BLEW. Naturally he kept the hanky (might need it again you know) and so the ref, having no proof to the misdemeanor had to forget about the penalty and we still had the ball. To this day the ref is still trying to figure out what happened to the hanky.

Well sir, on the last play from the opponents one and the score 36 all, to go around the end. Behind superb blocking he found himself in the clear and as he got to the line of scrimmage, horror of horrors, he dropped the pigskin! As the ball fell, it hit his foot and bounded over the goalline.

Well they carried him off the field — on their shoulders, as befitting the conquering hero. That unintentional punt went for a rouge

Watershow Tryouts This Thursday

The try-outs for the watershow will be held this Thursday, October 20, at 7:30 p.m. Anyone interested in performing is urged to attend this meeting. Solos, duos, and group numbers will round out the extravaganza.

Each year the show is more spectacular than the previous one and Miss Orser plans to make this one THE best. But your participation is needed. You are reminded that the routines will be planned for you by a special committee so all you will have to do is swim.

MUSIC CRITICS LEAD DISCUSSION

The first in a series of informal talks on music by prominent Montreal critics was held last night at Moyse Hall. The discussions are being held in an effort to give students and professors an insight into music production in Montreal.

Featured in last night's program were: H. P. Bell, Thomas Archer, and Eric McLean, three well-known music critics; Helmut Blume noted musicologist, and Gilles Potvin, well-known C. B. C. producer. Acting as moderator was Alexander Brott, violinist, teacher, and internationally known composer and conductor.

Violinist Joyce Blond representing the students, opened the debate by asking these critics if they read each other's opinions. They maintained that they did, but only after having formulated their own views (or so they claimed).

One of the more serious aspects of the city's music, the problem of Federal Government support, was brought up. Here both material and idealistic views were supported. Mr. Bell declared that he was against it as music would lose some of its independence; however Mr. Archer and Mr. Potvin agreed that federal support would be helpful. Eric McLean pointed out that if the federal government would support music, the provincial government would probably object even though it does not help itself.

In concluding this first discussion, Mr. Brott expressed the hope that at future meetings students should air some of their own views and join in the debate.

STUDENTS' ROLE . . .

that several others further down in the car had been injured.

"Dr. Sinit and myself went through the car, and helped all those we could. Without instruments of any sort, and in the dark, the only thing possible was to try and comfort the injured.

Gridders Aid

"Several of the students and the football players along — seven I believe — helped considerably by tearing down a door from one end and using it as a stretcher. We managed to remove most of the wounded this way. There were several shock cases, dislocated shoulders, and the like," Griffiths said.

Football players along included Joe and John Cronin, Garnet Bertrand, Emil Bosacki, Jim Grant and Johnny Bennett. They were sitting in the last two cars on the train, along with over 120 students.

"The shock wasn't too great back there," Bram Gelfand, BA II, said. "Most of us were sitting and talking when we felt a slight lurch. After we found out what happened we tried to keep most of the people out of the way, figuring that we could do the most good by keeping the area clear.

Go Into Village

"Several of the boys went into the village, to try and arrange their own transportation back. A Provincial Transport bus came through shortly after and several got on. The rest just got back in the last two cars, which weren't at all damaged, and continued to talk and sing.

"A little later someone said that the relief train had arrived, and most of the remaining students walked all the way up front with their luggage. It turned out to be a hoax, and back we went to the cars for more waiting.

"About 1:30 a.m. several buses arrived and we travelled back to Montreal in those," Gelfand said.

and we won the game. The rest of his career is rather vague, the years drawing a faint line between past and present, but it seems he tried out for a pro team, was cut, and entered Archipelago Tech on post-grad work. That year their team folded.

But reminiscing about him brought up another point — WE STILL DON'T HAVE CHEERLEADERETTES; (But Varsity had 50 - count 'em five - oh — at their game Saturday).

A YEAR . . .

probably re-learn what was necessary by themselves in one evening could complete their classics requirement in one year, and perhaps go on to take the advanced course, in the second year. Students in Latin I would be on a far more equal basis, as far as previous experience with the subject is concerned, and lecturers should also find the teaching easier.
